

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF FORENSIC STUDIES (AIAFS) presents

Juvenile Problematic Behaviors and the Criminal Justice System through a Threat Assessment Lens

Presenters: Kostas Katsavdakakis, Ph.D., ABPP and Jerrod Brown, Ph.D., MA, MS, MS

Date: Friday, December 9, 2022 Time: 9:00 am - 12:00 pm (CST) 3.0 CEUs

Training Description

Juveniles who become involved in the criminal justice system frequently exhibit externalizing behavioral problems. Externalizing behavioral problems include many of the diagnostic symptoms of conduct disorder and other disruptive behavioral conditions. These actions can take the form of impulsivity, deceit, theft, vandalism, truancy, substance use, and physical aggression. Typically emerging during childhood, these problems have been linked to poor relationships and interactions of the child with their parents and peers. Short- (e.g., poor school performance) and long-term (e.g., involvement in the criminal justice system) negative life outcomes are predicted by externalizing behavioral problems. The age of onset and severity of externalizing behavioral problems may even be exacerbated by the COVID-19 global pandemic. This training will examine the causes, consequences, and interventions associated with juvenile externalizing behavior problems in the era of COVID-19 and beyond through a threat assessment lens. Empirically based research findings and case study examples will be highlighted throughout this training.

Training Objectives

1. Define juvenile externalizing behavioral problems and other related constructs.
2. Examine the causes, consequences, and interventions for externalizing behavioral problems among juvenile justice-involved populations.
3. Briefly review standards of practice for the assessment of juvenile offenders who demonstrate problematic behaviors.
4. Differentiate between threat and risk assessment among juvenile populations.
5. Examine relevant warning signs for potential escalating violence.
