Presenter: Jerrod Brown, Ph.D., MA, MS, MS, MS

Date: Friday, June 24, 2022 Time: 9:00 am - 12:00 pm (CST) 3.0 CEUs

Training Description

Sleep is foundational to optimal health, wellness, and daily functioning. Unfortunately, problems associated with sleep are a common issue among individuals in the general population, with even higher rates reported among persons involved in the criminal justice system. Designed for professionals (particularly interviewers) working in clinical, criminal justice, forensic mental health, and legal settings, this training broadens awareness of sleep-related problems and identifies practices and techniques designed to improve the accuracy of information garnered during interviews. Other topics discussed in this training include suggestibility, misinformation effect, fantasy proneness, false confessions, vulnerability and victimization, executive dysfunction, error monitoring deficits, uncertainty, rule following problems, carelessness, problematic coping strategies, language impairment, auditory processing deficits, social cognition, sluggish cognitive tempo, comprehension deficits, fatigue, information processing deficits, choice-making deficits, abstract reasoning deficits, memory confusion, self-regulation deficits, and sensory processing limitations to name a few. Empirically based research findings will be highlighted throughout this training.

Training Objectives

1. Examine common sleep-related disorders
2. Develop a working knowledge of the behavioral, emotional, social, and physical health consequences associated with sleep disturbances among psycholegal populations
3. Examine interviewing approaches most appropriate for individuals with sleep-related problems who are involved in clinical, criminal justice, forensic mental health, and legal settings.
4. Learn about the role sleep-related problems play in problematic and criminal behavior
5. Acquire an understanding of the existing empirical research on sleep-related problems among psycholegal populations
